AT THE ACADEMY.

which has been finding so much favor, and which is to be seen at the Academy Christmas Day, is said to be very clever-ly arranged. Of course, Harum is the central figure and around him are grouped all the characters of the book. There is old Aunt Polly, Pretty Mary Blake, the Widow Culiom, and John Lenox, who is the cashier of Harum's bank. Then there is Dick Larribee, pert Chet Timson, the miscerable old usurer, "Zoke Swinney; the sanctimonious, yet withat, horse-loving, Deacon Perkins, and Amos Elright, the kindlord of the Eagle Tavern, with his boast that his is the only hotel at which they give five kinds of pie for breakfast. General Wolsey moves through the play, and so does the village fough, Bill Montalg, and Poleg Hopkins, the small boy at the bank. The character sketches are all capitally drawn and equally well portrayed, and to play promises to win even more success than did the book. It has much to commend it, inasmuch as it is clean and wholesome, tells a most interesting story, is replate with bright lines and quaint sayings, and has a delightful and refreshing atmosphere.

"When Knighthood Was in

"When Knighthood Was in Flower."

Few plays that have been produced in recent years have created more animated discussion than "When Knighthood was in Flower." Paul Kester's dramatization of Charles Major's beautiful romanes of that name, which will be seen at the Academy Saturday, matines and night, with Roselle Knott, a beautiful young emclional actress, to whom Manager Frank L. Perley has entrusted the role of Mary Tudor, the part in which Julia Marlow gained lasting fame.

There has naturally been cause for the discussion the play has aroused, the fascinating story of which is the foundation of the piece. It gives a vivid description of the shady side of royalty during the reign of King Henry VIII. of England, ns well as a characterization of probably the only good woman at the court, "Mary Tudor." the King's sister. Miss Knott's exquisitely finished performance of the madeap princess, it is said, is a protraiture that will live in the memory of those forlunate enough to see her.

That the play will be most liberally patronized at its presentation here goes without saying, and the piece deserves it, for Frank L. Perley, the manager, will bring the entire Julia Marlow production (built expressly for the Criterion Theatre, New York.) here, together with an excellent commany including Frank Sylvester as Churles Brandon.
